I can't understand how it is. Yesterday I went into a Broad Street store, and asked the clerk how many she had sold. She said she had only sold 60 cents' worth since she began. I asked her if she knew what the stamps were for. She said, I reckon I do. My mother has consumption now, and my sister is at the Catawba Sanstorium. But I can't sell where the people will not buy. The women are buying stickers in the stores to attach to their Christmas packages, and are paying just what they can get Red Cross stamps for."

At the headquarters of the State Anti-Tuberculosis Learue, the same report was made. Some Richmond merchants have sold out their entire supply, but only one is reported as having sent for additional stamps.

Trial of Former Bank Cashier for Falsifying Report.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] EUREKA MILLS, VA., December 16. -The trial of Frank C. Thornton, cashler of the defunct Charlotte Bank--The trial of Frank C. Thornton, cashier of the defunct Charlotte Banking and Insurance Company, on the charge of falsifying his report of the condition of the bank to the State Corporation Commission, was begun Aubrey E. Strode, of Amherst county, is assisting Commonwealth's Attorney Thomas E. Watkins in the prosecution of the case, It look about one hour to 'procure a jury, out of a panel of seventy-live men, who had been summoned. The panel was about two-thirds exhausted to secure sixteen men who were competent to serve.

Mr. Thornton's counsel asked for a change of venue, on the ground that he could not get an impartial jury in this county. The motion was overruled by Judge Hundley.

Congressman H. D. Flood, W. C. Carrington and C. R. Green are representing Mr. Thornton, and every point is being contested by both sides.

B. F. Oden, Mr. Flood's private secretary, is acting as stenographer in the case. There are three other indictments pending against Mr. Thornton.

Richmond Surgeon Tells Students Arctic Explorer Carried Proper Outfit.

"Dr. Cook carried sufficient nutriment for his party, if the account I read was correct," said Dr. C. M. Hazen, of the surgical staff of Memorial Hospital and lecturer at the Medical College of Virginia, to his students yesterday. The statement directly controverts the declaration of some than any other kind. For the average man 100 grams of proteid, 100 grams of fat, and 250 grams of carbohydrates, such as starch and sugar, suffice for one day, and, of course, in extremely cold climates this ought to be in creased somewhat.

"The gum drops were in the nature of increasers of heat, inasmuch as of increasers of heat, inasmuch as they were composed largely of sugary substances which generate heat. They probably were a great delicacy to the Eskimos in the party, for sweets are unknown in the far north, where there are no vegetables from which to create sugar, and where a few berries each year are a great delicacy to the natives.

"I wonder that Cook did not carry pork and beans, on account of the pork and beans, on account of the great nutritive value of that com-pound. It was much used by explorers and travelers in Alaska, and is as good vesterday. The statement directly controverts the declaration of some anti-Cook enthusiasts, to the effect that the explorer carried too little food to enable him to reach the goal.

Dr. Hazen said:

"The food carried by Cook was of the correct kind, and had the right."
